PRIDE of ancestry is common to all ages and all peoples, and it is an entirely proper and justifiable sentiment. We know that man, like other animals, possesses the power to transmit to his offspring the mental and physical characteristics that have been most prominent in himself. Students of social science tell us that the children of criminals are apt to prove criminals themselves, and other things being equal, the man who can trace his descent through a dozen generations of honest men is for that very reason more likely to prove himself an honest man.

The history of the Allerton family is a strong proof of the enduring quality of family traits and characteristics, both physical and mental, for we find in members of two branches, that have been entirely separated for two centuries, the same physical appearance and the same mental peculiarities. We find in a majority of the family to-day many resemblances in personal appearance to their common ancestor, and we find still more prominent the same peculiarities of mind and disposition. We are proud to recognize the same spirit of honesty and independence that led him to cast in his lot with the adventurers of New Plymouth, and the same broadness of mind and toleration of the opinions of others that brought him into conflict with the narrow spirit of puritanism. We claim a share of his courage and his enterprise and we admit that we have also inherited somewhat of his quick temper, and of his wandering disposition and unsettled spirit. The Allertons have ever been wanderers, they can point to no one place as the home of their family, the same restless spirit that led their ancestors up and down upon the earth has appeared to be always with them, it is only in a few rare cases that we find the son continuing to dwell where his father dwelt before him; and this fact, while affording another proof of the possession of common traits of character, has rendered it difficult to collect a complete genealogical record of the family.

The author began the work of collecting material for a family history some ten years since, and pursued it in such time as could be spared from the practice of his profession, but he soon found that another had been for a long time at work in the same field. The late Mead Allerton of Newark, Wayne County, New York, after working for many years at this task, left at his death a large and valuable manuscript, which was placed in the author's hands by his widow, and from which many details for this volume were obtained, especially in regard to the fourth, fifth and sixth generations of the Rhode Island and New York branches. Mead Allerton had not been able, however, to collect much information about the New Jersey branch, and to obtain this has been the most difficult part of the work, but the author believes that he is now able to present a complete genealogy of the entire family from 1585 to 1885. Where dates later than 1885 have been furnished, as in most cases they were, they have been given, but no attempt has been made to complete the genealogy of a date later than December 31 of that year.

The arrangement of the genealogy which has been used is believed to be the least confusing, and the one most easily followed in tracing descent or relationship. The different generations, counting Isaac of the Mayflower as the first, follow each other, and each member of the family is distinguished by two numbers; in the first place they are numbered consecutively from beginning to end, and when it becomes necessary to mention any member his or her number is always given, so that the reader can turn at once to the record; and every member is also distinguished by a number indicating the generation to which he belongs. Thus if any one wishes to trace Russell Allerton of Scituate, Rhode Island, he will find his name in the index, and turning to the proper page will find him thus numbered, "64 Russell<sup>1</sup>," he will also find a record of his life and that he was the son of Roger<sup>6</sup> (31), and turning back to 31, he will find that Roger<sup>6</sup> was the son of John<sup>5</sup> (13), and thus he can trace his descent back to Isaac<sup>4</sup>.

In order to keep the volume within the limits desired, it has been necessary to make the record of each family as brief as possible, and thus the author has been compelled to omit many details that were interesting and even valuable. No claim is made that perfection has been attained, the author is conscious of many defects, and no doubt errors will be found, but a strong effort has been made to exclude every fact that was not supported by apparently absolute evidence of its truth. Thus all details of the eighth, ninth and tenth generations have been obtained from living members of the family, and as far as possible they have been carefully revised and verified. And in preparing the record of the earlier generations much that appeared to be and no doubt was true has been rejected, because the evidence to absolutely confirm it was lacking; no credence has been given to common fame or tradition, and if the author has erred at all in this respect it has been on the side of strict requirement of proof, and in no case has conjecture or imagination been resorted to to fill a gap.

The name of Allerton is one that is comparatively common in some parts of England, and there are several families now in the United States who are in no way related to us, being emigrants from England themselves or the descendants of such, a list of these Allertons will be found at the end of the genealogical record. The beauty of the name has also caused it to be frequently used by novelists and other writers, and it has been occasionally assumed by persons not belonging to the family, some of whom have not been of a character calculated to reflect credit on any family.

Where nearly every one to whom the author has applied for information has gladly responded, it may seem unfair to mention any in particular, but while the author takes this opportunity to thank all who have in any manner assisted him, he feels that the members of the family generally ought to know the names of those who have rendered particular service. Besides Mead Allerton to whom the greatest credit is due for many years of patient and painstaking research, the author has received valuable assistance from the following persons:

Mrs. Jane G. Allerton, of Salem, Ohio.

James M. Allerton, of Port Jervis, New York.

Orville H. Allerton, of Newark, New York.

Mrs. Clara E. Delap, of Osnaburgh, Ohio.

Charles B. Allerton, of Keelersville, Michigan.

Ezekiel Allerton, of Roanoke, Indiana.

Lemira C. Allerton, of Youngstown, Ohio.

Mrs. James Kynett, of Alliance, Ohio.

Jasper Tilden, of Jefferson, Wisconsin.

H. D. Hutson, of Deerfield, Ohio.

In the matter of inserting portraits the only rule followed has been to give as many as possible, and a sincere endeavor has been made to make the portraits fairly representative of all the branches of the family, and of as many generations as possible. In justice to himself the author desires to say, that in giving a space to his own portrait, he has yielded to the request of a large proportion of the family. And in fact the desires of others have been carefully considered in many respects, and such changes in the plan or scope of the history have from time to time been made, as seemed likely to make it satisfactory to the great majority of those interested.

In conclusion the author earnestly requests all members of the family and all others into whose hands this volume may come, to carefully examine it, and if they find any errors or omissions of any kind, to notify him at once, as it is his intention to print in due time a sheet of additions and corrections, that will be sent to all having the history for insertion in the same.

At the end of the volume will be found a few sheets of blank paper upon which the record of each family can be continued, and it is hoped that this will be done in every case.

THE ALLERTON FAMILY.

IN reviewing the history of the Allerton family the circumstance that first attracts our attention is the slow growth in numbers prior to 1800. The names of only eighty-three Allertons who were born before the opening of the present century are mentioned in this volume. This remarkably slow increase is accounted for by the fact, that Isaac the second, from whom the family is descended, left but one son, Isaac the third; and he in his turn left but two sons, John and Jesse; and if Jesse had other sons than Zachariah they undoubtedly perished in the massacre of Wyoming.

Since 1800 however the family has rapidly increased in numbers, until at the present time there are at least three hundred persons living who are Allertons by birth and lineal descendants of Isaac of the Mayflower.

While they are scattered over the entire country, by far the greater number reside in the States of New York, Ohio and Michigan, while in New England, the original home of the Pilgrims, there are now less than a dozen members.

For convenience in tracing the history of the family the author at an early period of his work began to divide them into three branches; the Rhode Island branch, being the descendants of John<sup>5</sup>; the New York branch, being the descendants of Isaac<sup>5</sup>; and the New Jersey branch, being the descendants of Zachariah<sup>5</sup>.

The Rhode Island branch is now practically extinct, there being but one male descendant of John<sup>5</sup> now living, Henry Allerton, of Lawrence, Massachusetts.

The New York and New Jersey branches are about equal in numbers, there being about seventy male representatives of each now living. The majority of the members of the New York branch are still residents of that State, while the New Jersey branch, though more widely scattered, seems to be more numerous in Ohio than in any other State.

The New York branch, which is entitled to the honor of being the older and principal branch of the family, has always been the most successful, and has contained the larger number of men who have attained to positions of eminence in professional or business life. Some curiosity has been shown in regard to the head of the family, and it is a fact of some interest that the late Mead Allerton of Newark, New York, who first began the collection of materials for a family history, was himself the head of the Allerton family, his descent from Isaac<sup>2</sup> being direct through the oldest sons in every generation. Who is entitled to claim the honor at present is a matter of some doubt perhaps, but the ordinary rule of succession would make his brother, Ransom Allerton, of Manchester, Ontario County, New York, the present head of the Allerton family in the United States.

The history of the Rhode Island branch is very brief; they resided in Rhode Island and in Windham County, Connecticut, and were generally farmers, but many of the sons of this family died young and unmarried, others inherited consumption from their mothers and died in youth or early manhood, until, as has been stated, the branch is now practically extinct.

The New York branch, after residing in Connecticut about fifty years, removed to Dutchess county, in New York, and to the county of Greene, on the west bank of the Hudson, where many of them reside to this day, and from there they gradually followed the general tendency of settlement to the west, and at the present time the most of them are to be found in central and western New York, while many have become residents of the north-western States.

The New Jersey branch has always shown a roving and unsettled disposition, their history has been the most varied and the most difficult to trace. It is certain that Jesse<sup>4</sup> had at least two other sons besides Zachariah<sup>5</sup>, but no traces of any of their descendants have ever been found. There is a tradition, which seems to be entitled to acceptance, that two sons of Jesse, after removing to New Jersey with Zachariah, continued still further into the wilderness, and settling in the Wyoming valley, were killed with all their families at the time of the celebrated massacre. There is no mention of the name in any of the accounts of the massacre, but this is not conclusive proof that they were not there at the time, and in most accounts we find the names of several families of Athertons among the victims, and this we know to have been the most common of the many mistaken forms which the family name has often taken. It has been very difficult to obtain facts as to names, dates, etc., of the members of the New Jersey branch of the fifth, sixth and seventh generations, and the rule, which has been invariably adhered to, of rejecting every item about which there seemed to be even the suspicion of doubt, has rendered it impossible to give many details of their lives. But the chain of descent has been traced in every case with absolute certainty, so that every living member of the family can readily follow his own line back to the common ancestor, and can ascertain the exact degree of relationship existing between himself and any other Allerton. The sons and grandsons of Zachariah gradually drifted from New Jersey westward through Pennsylvania to north-eastern Ohio, where the greater number of his descendants now reside, although many of them are found in Michigan, Indiana and other western States.

The great majority of the family are to-day, as they have always been, farmers. They have never showed a tendency to city life, and very few are at present dwelling in any of our large cities. Outside of farming the occupation most favored has been that of machinist.

Each of the learned professions has had several representatives. The clergymen have been Reuben<sup>7</sup>, Isaac<sup>7</sup> and Job D<sup>9</sup>, of whom only the latter is now living. The physicians were Reuben<sup>6</sup>, Cornelius<sup>7</sup>, Goodwin<sup>7</sup> and Cornelius<sup>8</sup>, all able and successful practitioners, but at present there are none living engaged in that profession.

The three lawyers are Russell<sup>7</sup>, of Scituate, Rhode Island, who died in 1815, and James M<sup>8</sup>, of Port Jervis, New York and Walter S.<sup>9</sup>, of New York City, both of whom are now living.

Members of the family have fought in all the wars that have occurred since the landing of the Pilgrims, including the old Indian wars, the Revolution, the war of 1812, the Mexican war and the Rebellion. The history of the last war shows that besides several who aided the National government in civil capacities, many Allertons left their homes and went forth to battle and to die for the preservation of that liberty which their great ancestor had done so much to establish.

The Allerton family has as yet given no great names to history, they have never sought office or the rewards of political strife, the occupations to which they have generally devoted themselves have never been those that lead to fame or to political preferment, they have been farmers, merchants or mechanics, and have been content to be good citizens and honest men. There is no record of an Allerton having ever been convicted of a felony, and although there have been a few black sheep, the whole history of the family is remarkably free from moral blemishes of any kind.

Physically, they have always been a hardy and vigorous race, and in general long lived, many living to be ninety or more, and one, the late Samuel W. Allerton, of Newark, New York, being ninety-nine years and eight months old at his death. In appearance the majority are large framed, rather over than under middle height, fair complexioned with dark hair and eyes, many have brown or sandy hair and some blue or gray eyes, but few, if any, have been known who were of a distinctly blonde type. In youth they are generally slender and quick in action, and many have been noted for strength and dexterity, but they are apt to become quite fleshy in old age. The most prominent physical characteristic of the family is the shape of the forehead, eyes and nose, this can easily be seen by taking a number of portraits of members of all branches, and placing cards over them in such a manner as to show only the upper half of the face, when a remarkable similarity will be noticed by any one.

They are a quick tempered race and apt to act upon impulse, very decided in both likes and dislikes, and usually rather uncommunicative and reserved, not very ready to make new friends but firm in their attachment to old ones. Many of them have been called eccentric, and a few have been regarded, and perhaps justly, as carrying their erratic tendencies beyond a proper limit. In general they have intermarried with those who like themselves were descended from the early English settlers of this country, and the family has been kept remarkably free from any admixture of alien blood. There do not appear to be any diseases hereditary in the family, or any physical peculiarities other than those already mentioned.

In religion they are all Protestants and nearly all denominations are represented, but probably more belong to the Baptists than to any other one church.

In politics they are, with a very few exceptions, Republicans.

ISAAC ALLERTON.

THE exact time or place of Isaac Allerton's birth is not at present known to his descendants in the United States. He probably belonged to an old and honorable family of mixed Saxon and Danish descent, that had been for many centuries located in the south-eastern part of England, many representatives of which are still to be found in Suffolk and the adjacent counties. He was born between the years 1583 and 1585, and resided at London for some time prior to removing to Holland, in 1609.

Much speculation has been indulged in as to his business before that time, and he has been stated with confidence to have been a farmer, a seaman, a tailor, and more frequently has been more broadly called a merchant. One writer has shrewdly guessed that he had no particular business or occupation, which is quite possibly the more correct statement, since he could not have been more than twenty-four years old at the most when he left England.

He is generally admitted to have been the wealthiest of all the Pilgrims, and is one of the few among them to whom Bradford and other contemporaneous writers always give the prefix "Mr.," which in those days was used as an index of superior family or respectability. He was also one of the three upon whom the privilege of citizenship was conferred by the city of Leyden, his associates in this honor, which was given February 7, 1614, being William Bradford, afterwards Governor of the Plymouth colony, and Degory Priest, his brother-in-law. He was first married, as we learn from the records in the Staathuis or City Hall of Leyden, on November 4, 1611, to Mary Norris, of Newbury, in England, and at the sailing of the Pilgrims, he had four children, all born in Holland, three of whom, Bartholomew, Remember and Mary came over with their parents in the Mayflower, while the youngest, Sarah, remained behind and came over later with her aunt Sarah Priest.

On the 6th of September, 1620, the Mayflower sailed from Plymouth upon her memorable voyage, having on board, besides her officers and crew, one hundred and one passengers, and among them Isaac Allerton, with his wife and three children and one servant, John Hooke by name. The voyage, as was natural at that season of the year, was a long and stormy one, and disease and death were already at work among the over-crowded passengers of the little vessel, when on November 9, at break of day the sandy hills of Cape Cod became visible upon the western horizon. Their original design had been to make their settlement near the mouth of the Hudson, and accordingly they put about at once to the south, but soon found themselves entangled in the shoals of that dangerous coast, and being all of them, but especially the women and children, heartily sick of confinement within the narrow limits of the little vessel, the desire to be once more on land became too strong to be resisted. The captain also, having been bribed by the Dutch West India Company not to carry them to the Hudson, declared that further progress to the south was impossible and putting about once more to the north, they doubled the northern extremity of the Cape the next day, and came to anchor in Cape Cod harbor to ride out a storm.

This land, upon which they had now decided to settle, being in the forty-second degree of latitude, was without the territory of the Virginia Company, and therefore the charter they held became useless; and some symptoms of faction and of an inclination to throw off all authority appearing among the servants who had been hired in England, it was thought best by the leaders of the Colony that they should enter into an association for self government and bind themselves to be governed by the will of the majority. Accordingly after solemn prayer they drew up and signed the famous instrument which has ever since been known as the Compact, and which has most happily been styled the first of American Constitutions. It ran as follows: "In the "name of God, Amen. We whose names are under- "written; the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign "lord King James, by the grace of God of Great "Brittain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of "the Faith, &c., having undertaken for the glory of "God, and advancement of the Christian faith, and "honour of our King and Country, a voyage to "plant the first colony in the northern parts of "Virginia; do by these presents solemnly and mutu- "ally, in the presence of God and of one another, "covenant and combine ourselves together into a "civil body politic, for our better ordering and "preservation, and furtherance of the ends aforesaid, "and by virtue hereof to enact, constitute and frame "such just and equal laws and ordinances, acts, "constitutions and offices, from time to time, as shall “be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the Colony, unto which we promise all due obedience.

“In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names at Cape Cod, the eleventh day of November, in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord King James of England, France and Ireland, the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth. “Anno Domini, 1620.”

Isaac Allerton was the fifth signer of the compact, the only names which precede his being those of Carver, Bradford, Winslow and Brewster. They remained at anchor in Cape Cod Harbor for five weeks, during which time the men made many excursions to explore the surrounding country, while the women were taken on shore to wash the clothing. Finally, having selected a place for their settlement, on the 21st day of December, 1620, a date which by their act has been rendered one of the landmarks of history, they landed at Plymouth, and at once set about the erection of a store-house for their goods, and dwellings for themselves. But even before their landing several of their number had died, and although the winter proved to be an unusually mild one, it was still far more severe than those to which they had been accustomed, and this together with their enfeebled condition after the confinement of the voyage and the want of proper food and shelter, caused such sickness among the colonists that at times there were no more than six or seven of them well enough to nurse the sick, and by the coming of April, forty-four, or nearly one-half had died, and among them were Carver, the first governor, and his wife, and Mary the wife of Isaac Allerton, who died February 25th, 1621. While on the Mayflower in the harbor of Cape Cod, she had been delivered of a child, still-born, and the hardships and privations of that terrible winter proved too much for her strength thus enfeebled.

The first entry in the records of the Plymouth Colony is an incomplete list of "The Meersteads and Garden Plottes" assigned to those who came out on the Mayflower, at the first division of land. Each of these "Garden Plottes" contained one "aker." The list and diagram is as follows.

It will be noticed that the honorable prefix "Mr." is here given to Brewster and Allerton only.

The Street is now called Leyden street and leads from the harbor westward.

It is probable that Isaac Allerton built a house on his "Garden Plotte," but if he did he did not occupy it during the entire period of his residence in Plymouth, for in 1635, he lived at Rocky Nook, on Jones' River in Kingston, in a house which he afterwards sold "to my well beloved sonne-in-law Thomas Cushman," the location of which is still pointed out near the celebrated Elder's spring.

In March the colonists had grave apprehension of trouble with the Indians. On the night of the twenty-second an attack was expected and watch was kept, but there was no appearance of hostility, and as the old chronicle says, "The next day, Friday, "Captain Standish and Mr. Allerton went venturously "to visit King Massasoit, and were received by him "after his manner. He gave them 3 or 4 ground- "nuts and some tobacco."

As the result of this visit a treaty of peace was concluded, which held good for more than fifty years.

In April, Governor Carver died, and William Bradford was then chosen Governor, and Isaac Allerton Assistant Governor, a position which he held until 1624, and probably longer.

In September, 1621, a party of ten, including Isaac Allerton, went by water to explore what is now the harbor of Boston, and to visit the Indians who lived in that vicinity, and on this trip the first headland at Nantasket, at the entrance to the harbor was called Point Allerton, a name which it still retains, although it has sometimes been spelled Alderton; an adjoining hill in the town of Hull was also known for many years as Allerton Hill. For several years after the landing of the colonists Isaac Allerton was engaged, as were all the rest, in building houses and barns for shelter, in clearing and tilling the soil, and in managing with the other leading men, the affairs of the little settlement. We find him participating in another division of land in the spring of 1624, when seven acres, "on the south side of the Brook to the Baywards," were set off for him.

In 1626, he married Fear Brewster, the daughter of Elder William Brewster, who had come over in the ship Ann with her sister Patience, in 1623. She was a woman of a pleasing appearance and of a pious disposition, as we are told, and she is interesting to us as being the mother of that Isaac Allerton, the second of the name, from whom the Allerton family is descended. She died in 1634.

In the fall of 1626, Isaac Allerton was sent by the colonists to England, to obtain certain supplies for them of which they were in great need, and to arrange if possible a composition with the Adventurers, as those men who had advanced the funds for the colony were called. Bradford says that he was selected as the agent of the colonists in this matter as "being well qualified by education and experience, and having the confidence of the Merchants of London," and these advantages of education and experience in the affairs of the world, enabled him to manage the affairs of the colony with signal success for a time, but beyond doubt they were the natural causes of the disagreements which afterward took place.

In the spring of 1627 he returned with the draft of a composition, "drawn by the best counsel of law they could get to make it firm." By this contract, which was dated at London, November 15, 1626, the Adventurers sold to the Colony their entire interest in the settlement for £1800, "to be paid at the Royal Exchange, at London, every Michaelmas, in nine annual installments of £200, "each," and it was provided that they were to forfeit thirty shillings per week, for every week the debt was not paid after it was due. This composition was unanimously sanctioned, and Isaac Allerton was at once sent back to England with full authority to ratify and confirm it.

At the same time the entire trade of the colony for a period of six years, was bound to William Bradford, Edward Winslow, Isaac Allerton, and several others, in consideration of their assuming the entire indebtedness, amounting in all to about £2400, and in addition they were to pay the colony £50 per annum in hoes and shoes.

Having satisfactorily arranged the composition with the Adventurers and paid them their first installment of £200, and having paid other debts, Isaac Allerton returned to Plymouth in the spring of 1628, bringing with him a supply of goods, and also a patent for a trading station on the Kennebec, but when they came to compare the patent with the region to which it applied, they found it "so strait and ill bounded," that he was again sent to England, for the third time, to obtain the enlargement and correction of this patent, and also a new patent for Plymouth, and to arrange for the removal of the remainder of the church at Leyden. He was compelled to return to Plymouth without accomplishing all he had been desired to do, but being immediately sent back again, in August, 1629, he had better success, and obtained the desired patent January 29, 1630. He went to England several times after this on business for the colonists or for himself, crossing the ocean in all seven times.

About this time, 1630, began his trouble with the colonists, or rather with Governor Bradford, the true cause of which it is difficult to ascertain, and with a full account of which I shall not weary the reader. Bradford's version can be found, written with all the energy and rancour of his narrow and prejudiced mind, in the pages of his famous journal, but it is a series of complaints rather than a statement of facts, and evidently fails to state the true grounds of the disagreement. We might offset the complainings of Bradford with the statements of those who were better able to know the true value of Isaac Allerton's services to the colony; thus James Sherley, one of the Adventurers and a steadfast friend of the colonists, writes, March 8, 1629, "He hath been a truly honest "friend to you all, either there or here. And if "any do, as I know some of them are apt to speak "ill of him, believe them not." And again on March 19, 1629, he writes, in a letter signed also by Timothy Hatherly, a friend of the colonists at London, "But the Lord so blessed his labours " (even beyond expectation in these evil days), as "he obtained the love and favor of great men in "repute and place, he got granted all Mr. Winslow "desired in his letters to me and more also." Many similar statements might be quoted from letters and writings of other friends to the colony in England, while on the other hand Bradford complains bitterly that too much money had been expended in obtaining a charter, and that he had sometimes endeavored to further his own interests rather than those of the colony. But those who care to examine into the merits will inevitably come to the conclusion reached by a painstaking and impartial historian, that "As an agent Mr. Allerton appears to have been indefatigable in his "attempts to promote the interests of his employers. "He was a person of uncommon activity, address "and enterprise."

The true cause however of this difficulty with the colonists and with Bradford in particular, is undoubtedly to be found in the fact, that he was in mind, education and practice far more liberal than they, and that while his associations in England with the merchants of London, and the officers of the court and government tended to still further broaden and liberalize his views, their seclusion in the forests and among the dangers of the little settlement at Plymouth was most admirably calculated to make still narrower and more bigoted natures that were already inclined to the most puritanical of views.

We know that the church at Leyden took offence at the liberal tendencies of Isaac Allerton, that the colonists were greatly offended at his apparently innocent mistake in employing the notorious Morton of Merry Mount as his secretary, although in these days, Morton would almost pass for a saint, and when he became known as a firm friend of Roger Williams, and was found to have sheltered and protected many of the oppressed and persecuted Quakers, the cup of his iniquity was indeed full to the minds of the colonists, and we are not surprised to hear that about 1636, he left Massachusetts in consequence of the religious intolerance of the people, and went to New Amsterdam to live. Like most of his descendants, Isaac Allerton, though a just and fair minded man, was of a quick temper, apt to resent an affront, and impetuous in acting upon his impulses, and therefore, when once a difference had arisen between him and a majority of the Plymouth colonists, who were no doubt well represented by their narrow and dogmatic governor, there was little possibility of any reconciliation, even had there been more in common in their natures and their ways of life and thought.

Moreover he had given great offence by embarking extensively in business which conflicted in many ways with the industries of the colony. He was admittedly the first merchant of New England, and the founder of the coasting trade and the fishing industry. We find early mention of vessels owned by him, and he was the first to welcome Winthrop and his Company to the shores of the New World. Winthrop says in his journal, under date of June 12, 1630, "About four in the morning we were "near our port, we shot off two pieces of ordinance "and sent our skiff to Mr. Pierce (which lay in "the harbor and had been there——days before); "about an hour after Mr. Allerton came on board "us in a shallop as he was sailing to Pemaquid." In 1632 he attempted to set up a rival trading station on the Kennebec, and also to establish one on the Penobscot, but both these enterprises were unsuccessful, the latter station being broken up by the French in 1634. In 1633, Winthrop records that he fished with light boats at Marble Harbor, and he is justly regarded as the founder of Marblehead, for he made that place the headquarters of his fishing fleet, built a large warehouse, and resided there a great part of the time with his son-in-law Moses Maverick, until his liberal views again brought him into trouble with the General Court, as they had previously done with his old associates at Plymouth, and he was given "leave to depart from Marblehead."

That he was liberal in other matters as well as in religion, we know from the following extract from the records, under date of December 2, 1633:

"Whereas Mr. Will. Bradford was appointed in the
"behalf of the Court to enter upon the estate of "Godbert Godbertson and Zarah his wife, and to "discharge the debts of the said Godbert so far "as his estate will make good. And whereas the "greatest part of his debts are owing to Mr.
"Isaack Allerton of Plym., Mercht., late brother of "the said Zarah. The said Isaack hath given leave "to all other his creditors to be fully discharged
"before he receives any thing of his particular debts
"to himself, desiring rather to lose all than other
"men should lose any."

But about this time misfortunes began to come thick and heavy upon him. In 1634 his trading house at Machias was taken by the French and Indians and destroyed by fire with all its contents. In February of the same year, "Mr. Cradock's" "house at Marblehead was burnt down about "midnight, there being in it Mr. Allerton and many "fishermen whom he employed that season." The same year, returning from a trading voyage to Port Royal, "his pinace was cast away and entirely lost;" and on December 12, 1634, his wife died at Plymouth.

In 1635 his misfortunes still continued. In March, he was notified to leave Marblehead on account of his religious views, and in May he transferred all his houses, buildings and stages for curing fish at that place to his son-in-law, Moses Maverick. In August, a bark belonging to him, which had been hired to transport Rev. Mr. Avery and his family, from Newbury to Marblehead, was lost at Cape Anne, and twenty-one persons perished, and in 1636, while returning from Penobscot, he was himself shipwrecked.

From 1636 to 1646, he resided most of the time at New Amsterdam, where he was engaged in the coasting and tobacco trades, having a warehouse on the East River, somewhere near where the foot of Maiden Lane now is. That his intelligence and enterprise were thoroughly appreciated by the Dutch settlers is shown by the circumstance, that when, in 1643, a Council of eight were chosen from among the citizens, nominally to assist Governor Kieft, but in reality to manage him, Isaac Allerton was one of the number. While living at New Amsterdam, however, he made many voyages to Virginia and even to the West Indies, and frequently visited the New England Colonies; and notwithstanding the treatment he had received he often rendered good service to such residents of the Massachusetts settlement as came in his way. Thus Winthrop writes, in 1643: "Three ministers which "were sent to Virginia were wrecked on Long Island; "Mr. Allerton, of New Haven, being there took "great pains and care of them, and procured them "a very good pinace and all things necessary."

And in a letter from one John Haynes to Governor Winthrop, it is stated, "There is late news by "a vessel that came to the Dutch and from thence "to New Haven, by Mr. Allerton. The substance "thus: that there has been a great battle between "the King and Parliament forces."

In 1644, he was wrecked at Scituate, on his way from New Haven to the Colonies, and at this time we find the first mention of his third wife. The date of this marriage is not known nor the surname and residence of his wife; her first name was Johanna, and he is generally thought to have married her at New Haven, but I am inclined to think that she came more probably from Marblehead or Salem. She appears to have been a woman of a most excellent character, and she outlived her husband many years. At the time of this marriage Isaac Allerton must have been nearly sixty years of age and the union proved to be a childless one.

About 1647, Isaac Allerton became a permanent resident of New Haven, and at that place he lived the remainder of his life, although making occasional trips to New Amsterdam and Massachusetts. He built himself a "grand house on the Creek with Four Porches," on a home lot of two acres, which was situated about where Union street now is, just south of Cherry street.

An old plan of New Haven in 1748, shows the house of Simon Eyres, a descendent of his in this location, and mentions Isaac Allerton as the original owner. When he lived there the house stood on a gentle declivity sloping down to the harbor in front and to the creek on the west, affording a view of the waters of the Sound even to the coast of Long Island, and it must have been just such a home as would be most pleasant for the last years of one who had been so long a follower of the seas.

We find many mentions of Captain Isaac Allerton, as he is there called, in the old records of New Haven.

On March 10, 1647, the names of the people as they were seated in the meeting house were put upon record, and we find "Thomas Nash, Mr. Allerton and Bro. Perry," assigned to "the second seat of the cross seats at the end." It is to be noticed that as usual he is here given the honorable prefix "Mr."

The following account of a little difficulty which Mrs. Allerton had with the officials of the town, during her husband's absence upon one of his voyages, shows that human nature, especially as it develops itself in petty officers, was the same then as now. At a Court held at New Haven, August 6, 1650, "Mr Allerton's fence was complained of. "Jno. Cooper and the Marshall informed the Court "that Mrs. Allerton hath had notice of it three "times and yet the fence is not mended, but two "places remain defective as John Cooper says." The Court ordered that Mr. Allerton pay two shillings for the two defective places, each time they have so warned. The fence does not appear to have been mended, for the same report is repeated from one court to another, and an additional fine of two shillings ordered each time, until December, when "Mr. Evans saith Mrs. Allerton desired him to "acquaint the Court with the case." The explanation being that there had been a long misunderstanding between her and John Cooper about the location of the fence complained of. The Court said they "must rest on John Cooper's report be- "cause he is in a public trust in this matter of "fence, and therefore it is ordered that Mrs. Allerton "pay for the two defects, two shillings."

The misfortunes which had pressed so thickly upon him during the last years of his residence in Massachusetts, as to gain for him the name of the "unlucky," do not appear to have entirely deserted him yet, for we find the following record under date of November 2, 1652: "Robert Paine "and William Meaker were complained of for absence "from training. The Court was informed that Mr. "Allerton that morning sent to Goodyears to get "them free because of some urgent occasion about "his vessel. The Court considering that he did "send to ask leave, and it was upon that occasion, "and the time the vessel hath lain, and the afflicted "state of Mr. Allerton otherwise, did for this time "pass it over without a fine."

Isaac Allerton was now approaching the three-score years and ten, which are the generally accepted limit of human existence; his life had been one of hardship, activity and exposure; his son Isaac was now grown to manhood, and able to manage in great part the extensive, although not very successful business in which he had been so long engaged, and for the last few years of his life he seems to have resided most of the time quietly in his house upon the Bay.

He died about the beginning of the year 1659, being then in all probability nearly seventy-five years old. He was undoubtedly buried in the old Burying Ground at New Haven, occupying the square in the very heart of the present city, upon which stands the old State House and three churches. No monument or grave-stone has ever been found, nor is there any record of one being among those that were removed to the new Cemetery. At that time grave-stones were not made in this country, and the trouble and expense of importing them was so great that but few of durable material were used. But there can be little or no doubt that the dust of one of the Pilgrim Fathers reposes beneath the Elms of New Haven's public square. An Inventory of his estate, taken February 12, 1659, was presented to the Court April 5, 1659. "Mrs. Allerton being asked if there was any Will "by her husband, answered there was, but she "thought her son had it with him, who was now "gone from home." On July 5, his son, having returned, presented the Will, but the estate being badly insolvent the business was referred to the Court of Magistrates in October. At that Court the writing presented as the last Will and Testament of Isaac Allerton, although informal and without date, was sworn to by John Harriman and Edward Preston, the subscribing witnesses, as sealed and subscribed by Mr. Allerton deceased, "whilst he "had the use of his understanding and memory in "a competent degree."

This Will was little else than a few memoranda of debts due to him, which he desired his son Isaac and his wife to receive and pay out to his creditors as far as they would go, and it is only valuable to us as showing the nature and the extent of his business. It begins thus, "An account "of the debts due at the Dutch," meaning at New Amsterdam.

Among the debts are, "700 guilders by Tho. "Hall by arbitration of Captain Willett and Augustus "Harman, about Captain Scarlet which I paid

“out;” “900 guilders from John Peterson the Bore, “as by George Woolseys book will appear.” One item which helps us to fix the date of this Will approximately is a memorandum of a sum owing him from Henry Brassen, for rent for eighteen months from October 1656, to the last of May 1658, for three rooms for 3 guilders a week. After the clause constituting his son and wife trustees, he adds, as if it was an after-thought, a memorandum of “a parcel of book lace in Captain Willett’s hands 1300 and odd Guilders.” Next to this is the place of the seal, and it concludes with these two sentences: “My Brother Brewster owes me four “score pounds and odd, as the obligations appear.” “Besides all my debts in Delaware Bay and Vir-“ginia, which in my books will appear, and in “Barbadoes what he can get.”

ISAAC ALLERTON, SENIOR.”

His son, Isaac Allerton the second, purchased from the creditors his father’s dwelling house, orchard and barn, with two acres of meadow, and gave it to his step-mother for use during her life. She occupied it until her death in 1682, when it passed to Mrs. Eyres, the daughter of Isaac the second, and it was finally torn down in 1740.

It was in this house that the regicide Judges Whalley and Goffe found temporary shelter and concealment in 1661. Stiles, in his History of the Regicide Judges, says that they were protected by Mrs. Eyres, but in this he is in error, for, having been born in 1653, she was but eight years old at the time.

It was Mrs. Johanna Allerton, the widow of Isaac Allerton of the Mayflower, and her daughter-in-law, Elizabeth Allerton, who received and sheltered the judges.

No portrait of Isaac Allerton has come down to us, but he is said to have been slightly above the average height, of a spare but muscular frame, with dark hair and beard, a clear complexion and strongly marked features, a good looking rather than a handsome man. In the great majority of his descendants there can be noticed a great similarity of development in the upper portion of the head and face, more especially noticeable in the forehead, eyes and nose, and there can be no doubt that these physical marks, together with certain well defined traits of character, have descended to us from our common ancestor. He was superior to all of his associates on the Mayflower, except possibly Winslow, and one or two others, in education, and superior to all of them in knowledge of the world and familiarity with business, and as his experience in these matters was so much greater, his mental horizon was far wider and his views more liberal and more tolerant of the opinions of others. The only wonder is that he was able to agree with them as long as he did. The services which he rendered to the Colony have been fully appreciated by a few careful historians only; poetry and romance have combined to spread the fame of Standish the soldier, or of Alden the clerk, while the record of Allerton's work is buried in the dusty recesses of English offices, but had there been no Standish among the Colonists there could have been found others as competent to battle with the Indians, while it is hardly possible that any man among them could have accomplished all that Isaac Allerton did in London, and it is not too much to say that the very existence of the Plymouth Colony depended for a time upon the success of his negotiations there.

For two centuries and a third the dust of the Pilgrim leader has slumbered beneath the elms of New Haven, but his memory is fresh to-day and will always endure, not only in the hearts of his descendants but in common with his heroic companions of the Mayflower, his name will be forever cherished by the entire people of that mighty nation, the corner-stone of whose foundations was so deeply and so enduringly laid by the Pilgrims of Plymouth.

THE SECOND GENERATION.

1. ISAAC ALLERTON, of the Mayflower, had five children.
2. I. BARTHOLOMEW<sup>2</sup>, by his first wife Mary Norris, of Newbury, in England, born in Holland about 1612; he came over on the Mayflower with his parents, and was a resident of Plymouth in 1627, at the division among the settlers of the cattle brought from England, but shortly afterwards he accompanied his father to London, where he married and had children, but he never returned to America, and so far as is known no descendant of his has ever been found in this country.
3. II. REMEMBER<sup>2</sup>, also by his first wife Mary Norris, born in Holland in 1614; she also came over in the Mayflower, and was living in 1627, but probably died soon after, unmarried.

Gov. Bradford says that she married Moses Maverick of Salem, but he has confounded her with her younger sister Sarah.

4. III. MARY<sup>2</sup>, also by his first wife, born in Holland in June, 1616, came over in the Mayflower; was married in 1636 to Thomas Cushman, and from this marriage came the Cushman family of Massachusetts. She died in 1699, the last survivor of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower.
5. IV. SARAH<sup>2</sup>, also by his first wife, born in Holland in January, 1618; she did not come over in the Mayflower with her parents, but followed them soon after in the care of her aunt Sarah, the wife of Degory Priest, who afterwards married Mr. Godbertson. She married, in 1637, Moses Maverick, of Marblehead, had a large family of children, and died about 1655 or 1656.
6. V. ISAAC<sup>2</sup>, from whom the Allerton family is descended, was the son of Isaac<sup>1</sup> by his second wife, Fear Brewster; he was born in Plymouth, in 1630, and graduated from Harvard College in 1650. He accompanied his father after that on his voyages between Plymouth, New Haven and New Amsterdam, and was associated with him in the coasting business. After his father's death in 1659, he purchased from the creditors of his estate, the dwelling-house, orchard and barn, with two acres of meadow, and in the New Haven Records we find a deed recorded, dated October 4th, 1660, by which he conveys to his "Mother-in-law, Mrs. Johanna Allerton, the house "that she now dwells in at New Haven, "with all the furniture in it and the lands "and appurtenances belonging to it, to "hold and enjoy during the term of her "life, and afterward to return into the "possession of his daughter Elizabeth "Allerton and her heirs, and in case of "her dyeing without issue, then to return "to him the first donor, and his heirs and "executors without intermission."

To this deed after it was recorded was added on the margin of the book the following "true record" of a postscript, "This deed, though never witnessed when granted, I do hereby confirm to all "intents and purposes as if it had been “authentically witnessed, and so sign and “seal the same in presence of

JOHN SALMON,

“March 10. WILLIAM CORFIELD.

“1682-3. ISAAC ALLERTON.”

During the period intervening between the execution of this deed in 1660, and the confirmation in 1683, he resided most if not all of the time, in Northumberland County, Virginia, where a daughter of his married Hancock Lee, seventh son of Col. Richard Lee.

His business took him upon frequent voyages, upon one of which he is said to have visited England, and while upon a voyage to the West Indies about the year 1690, he is generally believed to have died and been buried at sea, and it is said that his son-in-law, Simon Eyres, who was associated with him in business, died at the same time. He was married probably in 1652, but little is known of his wife except that her first name was Elizabeth. He was a man of enterprise and ability and generally successful in business, but from boyhood a wanderer upon sea and land, having no settled habitation and consequently leaving but few records of his life for the information of his descendants.

Besides these Isaac<sup>1</sup> had at least two other children, both of whom, however, died in infancy.

SAMUEL W. ALLERTON.

THE THIRD GENERATION.

ISAAC<sup>2</sup> (6) had three children.

7. I. ELIZABETH<sup>3</sup>, born at New Haven, September 27, 1653. She married for her first husband, December 23, 1675, Benjamin Starr, who died in 1678, leaving one child, Allerton Starr, born January 6, 1677. For her second husband, she married, July 22, 1679, Simon Eyres or Heyres, a sea captain, by whom she had several children.
8. II. ISAAC<sup>3</sup>, born at New Haven, June 11, 1655. He accompanied his father to Virginia when a child, but returned to New Haven about 1683, and resided there, and at Norwich in the same State, during the remainder of his life, following his son, John<sup>4</sup>, to Coventry, Rhode Island, shortly before his death, the exact date of which is not known. He was a farmer and also a dealer in the products of the country, a quiet business man, taking but little part in public affairs, but serving with credit in the Indian wars.

But few details of his life have come down to us; the name of his wife is not definitely known, nor can we say with any certainty how many children he had. Besides John<sup>4</sup> and Jesse<sup>4</sup>, who grew to manhood, married and left descendants, he undoubtedly had another son, Isaac, who died young and unmarried, as well as several daughters.

9. III. A DAUGHTER, whose name is at present unknown, as well as the date of her birth, although it was not far from 1660. She married Hancock Lee, the son of Col. Richard Lee, of Virginia.

THE FOURTH GENERATION.

ISAAC<sup>3</sup> (8) had children as follows:

10. I. JOHN<sup>4</sup>, born at New Haven about 1685. In early manhood he removed to Norwich with his parents, and from there he went to Coventry in Rhode Island, where he had a farm and also dealt largely in produce, and was widely known as an energetic business man; but like his father he lived quietly and left but few records for the information of his descendants. He had a large family, and his wife, whose maiden name is unknown, survived him many years, and removed with a daughter, who married a man named Sweet, to the State of New York. He died at Coventry about the middle of the eighteenth century.
11. II. JESSE<sup>4</sup>, born at New Haven, in 1686 or 1687. In him the roving disposition of the family, which had been dormant for two generations, re-asserts itself, and it has ever been a prominent characteristic of his descendants. He married in early life and lived in various parts of Connecticut and Massachusetts; one account states that he died in the latter, while another states that he went to New Jersey with his son Zachariah and died there at an advanced age. He undoubtedly had a comparatively large family, but of his daughters absolutely nothing is known, and indeed no attempt has been made to trace the female members of the fourth and fifth generations. The tradition that several of his sons were victims of the Wyoming massacre is given elsewhere in this volume.

12. III. ISAAC<sup>4</sup>, born at New Haven, about 1690.
Died young and unmarried.

THE FIFTH GENERATION.

JOHN<sup>4</sup> (10) had eight children.

13. I. ISAAC<sup>5</sup>, born at Norwich, Connecticut, in 1724. But little is known with certainty of his early years, but after his marriage to Lucy Spaulding, about 1745, he lived at Canterbury and Plainfield, and followed the business of builder as well as being a farmer. In appearance he was a tall and robust man, and had considerable local fame as an athlete, until he sustained an injury to one of his legs while building a bridge, from the effects of which he never entirely recovered. Prior to the War of the Revolution he was quite wealthy, but having shown his devotion to the continental cause by taking the paper money of the provinces in exchange for produce and supplies furnished to the troops to a large amount, he eventually lost the greater part of his property. He removed to Amenia, in Dutchess County, New York, in 1792, and died there December 26, 1807.

During his lifetime he possessed several mementoes of the Mayflower and of the earlier years of the Plymouth Colony, among others a broad-axe which had been used to hew the timbers for the first house built by the Colonists, and a fuzee-gun taken in battle from an Indian warrior, but unfortunately since his death these relics have been lost. His wife survived him and died in 1813, aged 86 years, and they are both buried in the Cemetery at Amenia.

14. II. JOHN<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, Connecticut, about 1728. He was a farmer and also a cooper. He resided at Coventry, Rhode Island, where he married a widow named Rose Cooper, whose maiden name was Burlingame, by whom he had eight children. He injured one of his fingers while placing a back-log upon an old fashioned wood fire, from which blood poisoning resulted, and he died at the age of 48 years. He was buried in the family grave-yard on his farm at Coventry.
15. III. ELIZABETH<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1730, died young.
16. IV. ESTHER<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1733.
17. V. MARY<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1736.

18. VI. A SON<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1739, died in infancy.
19. VII. ANNA<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1742.
20. VIII. SARAH<sup>6</sup>, born at Norwich, in 1746.

JESSE<sup>4</sup> (11) had one child, besides others of whom we have no record.

21. I. ZACHARIAH<sup>5</sup>, born in Massachusetts, about 1730, he removed to New Jersey, and was twice married; by his first wife he had several daughters, of whom nothing is known, and by his second wife six sons and one daughter. It is said that he went to Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, after the close of the Revolutionary War, in which he served in the Continental Army, and died there about the year 1800.

THE SIXTH GENERATION.

ISAAC<sup>5</sup> (13) had six children.

22. I. JONATHAN<sup>6</sup>, born at Plainfield, Connecticut, September 15, 1746. His early life was passed on his father's farm, where he obtained a practical knowledge of farming as there practiced, and also of his father's trade of builder and house joiner. He also taught school in winter, and for several years he was so engaged at Amenia, in Dutchess County, New York, where, September 17, 1772, he married Bathsheba Mead, daughter of Joshua Mead. He was well educated for those days and an excellent penman, being much in demand to draw contracts, deeds, and similar papers. He served in the War of the Revolution until compelled by sickness to return home, and evidently shared in his father's confidence in the Continental currency, for we are told that he sold his interest and that of his mother-in-law, in the homestead farm for $2,000, and took his pay in that money, by which he lost nearly his entire property. In 1783, in company with others of his fellow townsmen, he purchased a tract of land, known as the Van Schaick patent, in the town of Cairo, in Greene County, New York, and removed there with his family. Here he taught school for several winters, and after filling a prominent place in the affairs of the little settlement for many years, he died August 10, 1806. His wife survived him for a long time, and died July 4, 1838, aged 84 years, and was buried beside him in the family grave-yard on the farm.

23. II. DAVID<sup>6</sup>, born at Canterbury, Connecticut, February 14, 1750. He was a farmer all his life, a man of a strong religious temperament and a most kindly disposition. He resided until manhood at Canterbury, where he was married about 1775, to Janet Montgomery, of Rhode Island, a relative of General Richard Montgomery. About the year 1785 he removed to Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, where he resided about ten years, and then moved again to Madison County, residing successively at Sangerfield, Smithville and Hamilton, at which latter place he died, October 31, 1828. His wife, by whom he had a large family, died, September 17, 1830, aged 71 years.

24. III. REUBEN<sup>6</sup>, born at Canterbury, Connecticut, December 25, 1753. He was unusually well educated for those times, and studied medicine with Dr. Fitch of New Haven, and surgery with Dr. Spaulding of Norwich, a relative of his mother, and became eminent as a physician and surgeon. He resided at Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, and during the War of the Revolution he served as a Surgeon in the Army of the Colonies, in which capacity he was present at the battle of Saratoga, and the surrender of Burgoyne. He married, September 1, 1779, Lois Atherton, of New Hampshire, and died at Amenia, October 13, 1808.
25. IV. ANNA<sup>6</sup>, born at Canterbury, April 20, 1757. Married in 1777, David Ransom, and in 1812, went with him to Herkimer County, New York, where she died, April 26, 1853.
26. V. ALICE<sup>6</sup>, born at Windham, Connecticut, May 23, 1765. Married late in life, David Runnels, and died in 1852, without issue.

27. VI. SARAH<sup>6</sup>, born at Plainfield, Connecticut, February 12, 1770. Married George James, a farmer of Rhode Island, by whom she had several children, and with whom she removed to Dutchess County, New York, where she died in August, 1858, the last descendant of the Allertons of the sixth generation. Many details for this genealogy were obtained from her.

JOHN<sup>5</sup> (14) had eight children.

28. I. FREELOVE<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, Rhode Island, in 1753. Married a Mr. Albro, of Saratoga County, New York.
29. II. SARAH<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, Rhode Island, in 1755. Died unmarried in 1837.
30. III. JERUSHA<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, Rhode Island, in 1760. Died unmarried in 1798.
31. IV. ROGER<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, Rhode Island, in 1763. He was well educated and taught school for several years in early manhood. In 1788, he married Mrs. Elsie Phillips, a widow, and daughter of Lieutenant Governor West, of Scituate, Rhode Island; prior to his wife's death, in 1828, he was a farmer at Scituate, and afterwards he kept a tavern at Providence for many years. He died in 1849, and was buried at Coventry, beside his parents.

32. V. JOHN<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, February 13, 1765. He resided in youth for several years with his uncle Isaac<sup>5</sup>, in Plainfield, Connecticut, and when about 16 years old moved to Brooklyn in the same State, where, in 1810, he married Molly Barrett. He was an industrious and successful farmer, and died at Brooklyn, January 2, 1839. His wife had previously died, July 3, 1838.

33. VI. BETSEY<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, in 1767. She accompanied her sister Freeloove to Saratoga, and married Samuel Campbell, by whom she had several children.

34. VII. RUSSELL<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, in 1769. He also removed to Saratoga County, New York, where he died, unmarried, in 1800.

35. VIII. ROSE ANNE<sup>6</sup>, born at Coventry, in 1771. Died, unmarried, at Coventry, in 1836.

ZACHARIAH<sup>6</sup> (21) had seven children by his last wife.

36. I. AMOS<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, April 6, 1760. He was by occupation a tanner and manufacturer of boots and shoes, and also at times a farmer, and of an unstable nature, never residing long in one locality. He married in early life, Chloe Stiles, and had a large family, and died at Lake Mills, Wisconsin, September 15, 1846.

37. II. JOHN<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, March 10, 1763. He was a farmer and a successful business man; he was married four times, by his first wife he had two children, and by his second wife, Rachel Crage, he had six children. He resided in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, until after the birth of his children, when he removed to Ohio, and resided at Waynesburgh and Smithtown. He died at the latter place, April 8, 1851.

38. III. STEPHEN<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, September 21, 1767. Married, about 1795, Catharine Lutz. He was a farmer by occupation, and resided in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, and afterwards at Coitsville, Mahoning County, Ohio, where he died November 15, 1832.

39. IV. SAMUEL<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, about 1767. He left home in early manhood, and as nothing has ever been heard of him or his descendants, is supposed to have died young and unmarried.

40. V. JOB<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, about 1770. He was a machinist by occupation, and resided in New Jersey and at Baltimore and Harper's Ferry, and finally settled in Stark County, Ohio. He married while young, Grace —, and had a large family, of whom only four lived. He died in Stark County, about 1840.
41. VI. JESSE<sup>6</sup>, born in New Jersey, about 1773. Died, unmarried, at the age of eighteen.

THE SEVENTH GENERATION.

JONATHAN<sup>6</sup> (22) had seven children.

43. I. JOSHUA<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, November 7, 1776. He was taken by his parents to Greene County in childhood, where he resided during the remainder of his life. He was a farmer by occupation, and being by nature both industrious and intelligent, he was unusually successful and acquired considerable property during a long and upright life. He married, April 29, 1804, Polly Bassett, then 24 years old, and like himself a descendant of the Pilgrims, by whom he had a large family. He died at Cairo, in Greene County, September 14, 1862.
44. II. ISAAC<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, January 15, 1779. He resided with his grand parents, after his father's removal to Greene County, in 1783, until he was 15 years old, when he followed him there and assisted him upon his farm until his marriage, March 6, 1806, to Charlotte Townsend. After his marriage he became a wagon maker, and after some years a miller, but being unsuccessful in this latter venture, he removed in 1820, to Benton, in Yates County, and became a farmer, first in that vicinity, and afterwards at Prattsburgh, in Steuben County. He died at Savona, in that County, April 2, 1863.

45. III. JOHN<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, July 24, 1781. He accompanied his parents to Greene County while a child, and in 1808 he married Polly Andress and removed to Delaware County. He was a farmer, but was unsuccessful, and finally became insane and committed suicide in 1819.
46. IV. SARAH<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, March 22, 1783. Died at Cairo, Greene Co., March 11, 1794.
47. V. ANNA<sup>7</sup>, born at Cairo, Greene County, December 13, 1785. Married Reuben German, February 10, 1816, and died at Cairo, July 16, 1863, she was a woman of great natural ability and good memory, and furnished many dates and other material for this genealogy.

ARCHIBALD M. ALLERTON.

48. VI. REUBEN<sup>7</sup>, born at Cairo, July 25, 1788.

He resided with his parents on the home-stead farm; and after his father's death he carried on the business for his mother and sisters until his marriage, May 29, 1814, to Maria Miller, of Cairo. In the fall of the same year he served a short period with the militia during the war with Great Britain, but saw no actual hostilities. He then purchased a farm at Cairo, and cultivated it until 1825, when he became a minister of the Christian Church, and took charge of a church at Somerstown, in Westchester County. Afterwards he removed to South-East, in Putnam County, and continued to preach there until his death, January 28, 1832. He was possessed of little education but great natural ability, and was a man universally liked and esteemed.

49. VII. LUCY<sup>7</sup>, born at Cairo, May 13, 1791. Married, March 15, 1815, Benjamin Bullock, of Greene Co. Died at Cairo, March 22, 1865.

DAVID<sup>6</sup> (23) had seven children.

50. I. ARCHIBALD MONTGOMERY<sup>7</sup>, born at Canterbury, Connecticut, December, 3, 1780.

Removed with his parents to Dutchess County, New York, and there married, December 3, 1803, Rebecca Chamberlain. After his marriage he removed to Bloomingdale, New York City, and for many years conducted a drove yard or cattle market, known as the Upper Bull's Head. He was of an energetic disposition and a good talker, with an apparently inexhaustible fund of anecdotes. His first wife died October 20, 1832, and he married, September 28, 1833, Bathsheba Parks, and removed soon afterward to Broome County, where he became a farmer, and died at Upper Lisle, in that County, April 11, 1863. His second wife, by whom he had no children, died at the same place, August 29, 1863.

51. II. POLLY<sup>7</sup>, born at Canterbury, February 14, 1783. Married in 1802 Philander Wilcox, of Madison County.
52. III. ISAAC<sup>7</sup>, born at Canterbury, February 14, 1785. He accompanied his parents in childhood, first to Dutchess County, and afterward to Madison County. He decided at the age of 14 to become a Minister of the Baptist Church, and it is said that before arriving at manhood he had charge of a congregation of Indian converts at Sangerfield. From 1805 to 1807 he preached at Hillsdale, New York, and in the latter year went to North-East, in Dutchess County. He was married, March 21, 1809, to Sylvia Winchell, daughter of Colonel Martin Winchell, of North-East. In the war of 1812, he acted as Chaplain in a militia regiment, and in 1815 assumed the charge of the Baptist Church at Sherburne, in Chenango County, New York, and in 1818, he went to Norwich, in the same County. From 1820 to 1840, he resided at New York City and in Putnam and Ulster Counties, and during this period he published several books on religious topics. From 1840 to 1849, he resided in the Town of Deer Park, in Orange County, and in the latter year he returned to Chenango County, and resided there and in the adjoining County of Broome, until his death, which occurred at Port Crane, in Broome County, February 14, 1875. He was thrice married, but had no children by his second and third wives.

53. IV. ANSON<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, May 14, 1787.
Died at the age of 18, unmarried.
54. V. NANCY<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, October 10, 1790.
Married, February 15, 1815, Calvin Owen, and after his death, married a Mr. Martin, of Greene County. Died in 1842.
55. VI. SALLY<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, October 15, 1792.
Married, December 8, 1810, Isaac Dunham, of Tioga County, New York.
56. VII. JAMES<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, May 2, 1795.
He was by occupation a mill-wright and machinist, and of a cheerful and reckless disposition. He married, in March, 1815, Jane Scott, and after her death he again married, August 14, 1830, Mrs. Harriet A.
Dawson, a widow. Soon after his second marriage, in the fall of 1831, while at Baltimore making arrangements to move his family to that city, he disappeared and was supposed to have been drowned.

REUBEN<sup>6</sup> (24) had seven children.

57. I. CORNELIUS<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, Dutchess County, New York, July 23, 1779.
He received a good education and studied medicine and surgery under eminent practitioners at New Haven, beginning practice at Pine Plains, in Dutchess County, in 1803. He married, September 22, 1813, Clarissa Heusted, and died at Pine Plains, April 26, 1855. He was successful as a physician, and esteemed by all for his charity and kindness of heart.

58. II. POLLY<sup>7</sup>, born in 1781. Died in childhood.
59. III. LUCY<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, in 1783. Married Thomas Barlow, and died at Amenia in 1860. She was famous as a beauty while young, and as a kind and worthy matron and mother in her later years.
60. IV. SAMUEL WATERS<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, December 5, 1785. Married, March 26, 1808, Hannah Hurd. He resided at Amenia, about 57 years, and then moved to Yates County, New York, and became a farmer, and after residing there some 8 years he went west, but soon returned and settled in Wayne County, where he died at Newark, August 10, 1885, in his one hundredth year, having been for nearly a century an honest, upright man.
61. V. AMARYLLIS<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, August 9, 1788. Died at Amenia, April 25, 1876, unmarried.

62. VI. MIRA<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, March 20, 1791. Married Taber Belden of Amenia, and died there in March, 1859.

63. VII. MILTON BARLOW<sup>7</sup>, born at Amenia, August 21, 1799. Married, January 20, 1825, Eliza Belden. He was engaged all his life in mercantile business, first in a country store at Amenia, and afterwards in New York City, where he died suddenly, December 8, 1866.

ROGER<sup>6</sup> (31) had four children.

64. I. RUSSELL<sup>7</sup>, born at Scituate, Rhode Island in 1789. He was a lawyer by occupation, and died November 16, 1815, unmarried.

65. II. GOODWIN<sup>7</sup>, born at Scituate, in 1792. He was a physician and surgeon, but died soon after beginning practice, May 12, 1819, unmarried.

66. III. JOHN<sup>7</sup>, born at Scituate in 1795. Died in 1830, unmarried.

67. IV. JERUSHA<sup>7</sup>, born at Scituate in 1797. Died unmarried, July 14, 1815.

The children of this family were all well educated and of more than average ability, but unfortunately inherited consumption from their mother, and all died of that disease in youth or early manhood.

JOHN<sup>6</sup> (32) had four children.

68. I. JOHN RUSSELL<sup>7</sup>, born at Brooklyn, Connecticut, April 12, 1811. He married, September 25, 1842, the widow of his brother George, and died June 23, 1882. He was a farmer and a man of influence in local affairs, having filled various town offices and represented his native town, in which he resided all his life, in the Legislature. He furnished many details of his own branch of the family for this genealogy.
69. II. GEORGE<sup>7</sup>, born at Brooklyn, June 13, 1818. Married, March 13, 1839, Adaline Spaulding. Died April 6, 1842. He was a farmer by occupation.
